

ALEXANDRIA GAZETTE.

MONDAY EVENING, SEPT. 13, 1897.

BURIED HIMSELF ALIVE.—According to a dispatch to the London Standard from Moscow, a fanatical monk has given another curious illustration of a form of religious delusion now raging in many parts of Russia. The priest in question had himself buried to the wrists in a cave near the town of Uralak, the capital of the government of the same name on the Ural, a district inhabited for the most part by Cossacks. He hoped to find salvation by mortifying the flesh, and asked his friends to return to him in a week, when he expected to have found the object of his desire. They consented to the arrangement, but on returning found him dead.

AN EXPLOSION.—Our former friend, Mr. Marcellus Edwards, had too good a joke on himself the other day to keep it quiet. He rose with the lark and went to the kitchen to make a fire for his wife to prepare an early breakfast. He could not find a match in the house, and there was no fire in the stove. As a dernier resort he stuffed paper and a little powder in his stove, loaded his squirrel run and fired into the combustibles. A deafening explosion followed, and his next experience was a ride to town and the purchase of a new cooking stove and a gross of matches.—[Warrenton Index.]
